For two centuries, Battle Harbour was the economic and social centre of the area. Today, this National Historic site has been revived, as a place to immerse yourself and step back in time to the traditional life and times of Newfoundlanders and Labradorians in a bygone era of 200 years ago.

Here, houses, stores, fishery buildings and churches have been fully restored and filled with historical artifacts. During your stay, you'll sleep in a merchant's home or doctor's charming period cottage, or maybe a policeman's house. In Battle Harbour, you'll soak up the atmosphere and fully experience the sounds of the ocean and the simple pleasures of times past.

During the day, explore historic structures, walkways, and work areas. Then hike around the craggy shores of the island and everywhere in between. Visit the oldest and most diverse fishing rooms in Newfoundland and Labrador and experience the lives of fisherman and merchants living in the community in the 18th, 19th, and 20th centuries. In the evening, eat with your fellow travellers and be entertained by traditional song, dance and recitation.

Take a moment or two to enjoy the company of others in the Sir Wilfred Grenfell Cottage. Have your discussions where Commander Robert E. Peary first spoke to the press, wiring news overseas detailing his historic trip to the North Pole in 1909. Perhaps get married in the second oldest Anglican Church in Newfoundland and Labrador.

Battle Harbour..... a truly authentic experience not to be missed

Accommodation

Battle Harbour Inn is surrounded by breathtaking oceanviews and is scenically located on a hill overlooking the merchant premises and Great Caribou Island. Once providing accommodation for the resident managers, explorers and agents, this charming Inn is fully restored to its former glory. This historic Inn features five rooms all with private bathrooms. Three rooms on the second floor and two on the main level. There is a cozy lounge area with a wood stove to add even more ambiance to this historic building. The glassed-in porch is a wonderful spot to sit and view sunsets. It is the perfect vantage point for relaxing and taking in the beauty of the Island.
